For as long as there have been food allergies, there have been food allergies symptoms, the two most common of which are: Bloating, swelling, and pain in the stomach/abdomen area Itchy, runny nose Those are the most common, but there can be many different physical and mental symptoms related to food allergies. Food allergies usually manifest themselves after a short period of time, but in some cases, symptoms can come on suddenly, leaving you in the dark until they are gone. What does it mean? Some food allergies can lead to anaphylaxis - a severe and sometimes life-threatening reaction that starts in the throat, breathing, or skin, and progresses to affecting other organs and systems. The signs include hives, a flushed face, difficulty breathing, shortness of breath, or swelling of the throat and tongue, along with an emergency medical response. I'm definitely a Type A personality, and my anxiety and hyperactivity depend on my blood sugar. I'm hyperactive. I have a hard time sitting still, and I'm often distracted and forgetful. I'm much more sensitive to anxiety and stress than most people, and I have Type A blood sugar. I was diagnosed with type 1 diabetes at just 10 years old, and I have been taking insulin since. I had some nerve damage from a car crash when I was 9 years old. I've had my ups and downs with depression, and I don't know where my depression stems from. I have seasonal allergies, and I used to have itchy eyes and runny nose, but they've been better for a while now. I'm a loner at times, but at other times, I'm very outgoing and talkative. I'm very social and involved in a lot of activities. People who know me have seen my moods fluctuate over the years. I had a really bad break-up when I was 17 years old, and I had the worst anxiety and depression I've ever had to that point. I withdrew into myself and stayed in my room for about a month, doing nothing but binge watching shows and reading books. I felt like I was going to die. It sounds like a lot, and it could be, but

What's New in the?

Darth Vader Wants to Kill Off All the Black Characters in Star Wars Darth Vader wants all the black characters in the new Star Wars movies killed off. Per On Media, director J.J. Abrams told the publication that he wants to kill off Luke Skywalker's entire family in The Force Awakens, which is said to take place decades before the events of the original Star Wars trilogy, and put an end to the Skywalker storyline. "I'd like to kill off Luke's family. End of Luke Skywalker story, end of that whole thing. His father. His sister. Kill his sister. Kill his father," Abrams told the publication. "As much as the fans love Luke Skywalker and [he is] clearly the hero of this saga — he's the heart of it — I love that guy and I love that character — I can't imagine it. I don't want it to be Luke at the end. I'd like to know what he becomes." The new story will pick up with Rey, Finn and Poe from the original trilogy, and no longer including Luke. "I want to see what Finn does," Abrams explained. "I want to see what Poe does, which is interesting because Poe is a totally untrained pilot, totally untrained, and he's like [at the academy]. The academy was a joke. He was like the Idiot Savant in their arms race. The Red Five, they had, like, three. Three ships in the class. Poe's probably the one that got the best of the best, honestly. And I want to see what Finn does. And Rey, because I want to see what Rey does, the new generation of characters. I want to see what they're like." Abrams went on to explain that he hopes to inject a sense of humor into the new movie, saying that both Leia and Han will be in the film. On Thursday night, The Hill reported that Sen. Susan Collins confirmed her intention to run in 2018 and formally announced her campaign a day later, a move that opens up the possibility of a vacancy in Maine's governor's mansion. "I will run for Governor in 2018 because I believe that the office of Maine's Governor provides an important service to our state,"
